Re: Petition for Public Records Disclosure Order
Department of Human Services
DOJ File No.: 100101-GA0114-20

Dear Ms. Taniguchi:

This letter is the Attorney General's response to your petition for disclosure under the Oregon Public Records Law, ORS 192.311 to 192.478. Your petition asks the Attorney General to order the Department of Human Services (DHS) to disclose certified copies of all police records related to your son's conviction for encouraging child sex abuse. We understand that your son needs these records for an application to bring his fiancée to the United States from China. For the reasons that follow, we respectfully deny your petition.

The Public Records Law confers the right to inspect public records in Oregon, unless such records are exempt under ORS 192.338, 192.345, or 192.355. ORS 192.314(1). The law is a disclosure law and exemptions from disclosure must be express. Any person denied the right to inspect or to receive a copy of a public record of a state agency may petition the Attorney General to review the record and determine if it may be withheld. ORS 192.411(1). The agency carries the burden to sustain its actions. ORS 192.411(1).

In response to your petition, we contacted Toni Zimmerman in DHS' Public Records Unit. First, she explained that DHS does not have any authority to provide certified copies of records created by other public bodies, such as police reports. In this regard, we also note that the Public Records Law does not require public bodies to furnish certified copies of public records. Attorney General's Public Records and Meetings Manual at 18, n 90 (2019). We therefore deny your petition insofar as it asks us to order DHS to provide certified copies.

Ms. Zimmerman also indicated that the records you seek were part of investigation into child abuse and were compiled by DHS under Oregon's Child Abuse Reporting Statutes, ORS 419B.010 to 419B.050. DHS asserts that such records are confidential under ORS 419B.035(1).[1] And records made confidential under state law are expressly exempt from disclosure under the Public Records Law. See ORS 192.355(9)(a). Although ORS 419B.035(1) contains exceptions that permit DHS to disclose otherwise confidential child abuse records in limited circumstances, Ms. Zimmerman explained DHS' position that none of those exceptions apply to your request.[2] She also explained that although DHS has limited discretion to release child abuse records when necessary to promote certain specified purposes,[3] DHS has determined that it is unable to exercise that discretion because disclosing the records to you will not serve those purposes at this time.

After discussing the records with Ms. Zimmerman, we conclude that DHS was permitted to withhold them from you in this instance. We find that they were compiled under Oregon's Child Abuse Reporting Statutes, which makes them confidential under ORS 419B.035(1) and therefore exempt from disclosure under ORS 192.355(9)(a). None of the exceptions listed in ORS 419B.035(1) expressly permit DHS to disclose them to you. And DHS may not exercise its discretionary authority under ORS 419B.035(3) unless disclosure is necessary to promote the limited purposes listed in that subsection. Under the circumstances, we have no reason to second-guess DHS' statutorily entrusted determination that disclosure to you at this time is not necessary to advance those limited purposes. We therefore respectfully deny your petition.

Sincerely,

Frederick M. Boss
Deputy Attorney General

[2] Regarding the exceptions to the general rule of confidentiality, ORS 419B.035(1) generally requires DHS to disclose child abuse records – in limited circumstances and for limited purposes – to: law enforcement agencies; certain medical providers; attorneys or other parties in juvenile court proceedings; certain citizen review boards; court appointed special advocates in certain proceedings; the Office of Child Care; the Office of Children's Advocate; the Teacher Standards and Practices Commission for certain investigations; Disability Rights Oregon, and to any person in cases where a child, as the result of abuse, died or suffered serious physical injury.

[3] ORS 419B.035(3) permits DHS to make records compiled under Oregon's Child Abuse Reporting Statutes available to any person "when the department determines that such disclosure is necessary to administer its child welfare services and is in the best interests of the affected child, or that such disclosure is necessary to investigate, prevent or treat child abuse and neglect, [and] to protect children from abuse ***."
