Deputy Director Hudson,

I want to personally thank you for the partial fee waiver, and to ask you one question.

Do you think it would advance the welfare and the well-being of the general public to know that writing to their government about mistreatment can lead to a referral to state police that alleges no crime or threat and results in three weeks of investigation, documentation of the citizen in multiple state and federal systems, and culminating in a "knock and talk" designed to instill fear into that citizen? Not one word of this relies on my words. It is in their own production.

Does that knowledge advance the welfare and the well-being of the general public?

I thank you for the partial fee waiver. Does my question have an answer from the deputy director?

Respectfully,

Robert Samuel White
